Summary: Information about invoices, updating payment details, payment failures, and billing receipts.

Invoices and receipts

An invoice is generated for each successful subscription charge and is available in the Billing section of the account portal.

Invoices include the invoice number, billing date, plan name, amount, tax if applicable, and payment status.

Update a payment method

Open Account Settings, select Billing, then choose Payment Method.

Add the new card or supported payment method and set it as the default before the next renewal date.

Changing the default payment method does not retry an already failed invoice automatically unless the portal offers a "Retry payment" action.

Failed payment

A payment may fail because of insufficient funds, an expired card, an incorrect billing address, or a bank security rule.

The system may retry a failed renewal payment for up to 7 days. During this grace period, account access may remain active.

If all retries fail, the paid subscription may be suspended until payment is completed.

Taxes and billing address

Applicable taxes are calculated from the billing location and tax information stored on the account. Update billing details before the next invoice if company or tax information changes.

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: Can an invoice be edited after payment?

A: Core transaction details cannot be changed after payment, but billing profile details may be updated for future invoices.

Q: Why do I see a pending card authorization?

A: Some banks display temporary authorizations before a charge is finalized. A pending authorization is not always a completed charge.
