Summary: Example refund rules for subscription purchases, duplicate charges, and service-credit requests.

Standard subscription refunds

Customers may request a refund within 14 calendar days of the initial paid subscription purchase.

Renewal charges are generally non-refundable once the new billing period has started, except where required by law or where a billing error occurred.

Duplicate or incorrect charges

Duplicate charges and confirmed billing errors are eligible for correction or refund regardless of the standard 14-day window.

Provide the invoice number, charge date, and last four digits of the payment method when contacting billing support. Do not send a full card number.

Refund processing time

Approved refunds are submitted to the original payment method within 2 business days.

Banks and card issuers may take an additional 5 to 10 business days to display the credit on the customer statement.

Service interruptions

Short service interruptions do not automatically qualify for cash refunds. For a verified extended outage, support may apply a prorated service credit to a future invoice.

How to request a refund

Contact billing support with the account email, invoice number, reason for the request, and the date of the charge. Refund decisions are confirmed by email.

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: Can a refund be sent to a different card?

A: No. Refunds are normally returned to the original payment method.

Q: Does cancelling a plan automatically refund the latest charge?

A: No. Cancellation prevents future renewals; it does not automatically create a refund.
